

5 Claude Prompts For Job Search

By IG: @thesanskaarsingh

1/ Tailor your CV like a recruiter would:

Prompt:

"You are a senior recruiter with 15 years of experience hiring for [industry]. Review my CV and the job description below. Rewrite my CV bullet points so they mirror the language and priorities in the job description without copy-pasting. For every bullet point, lead with a strong action verb and include a quantifiable result wherever possible — if I have not provided numbers, ask me before guessing. After rewriting, give me a score out of 10 for how well the new CV matches the role and list the top 3 things that could still be improved. CV: [paste CV] Job description: [paste JD]"

2/ Mock interview with brutal honest feedback:

Prompt:

"You are a hiring manager at [company name] interviewing me for a [job title] role. Run a full mock interview with me. Ask me one question at a time and wait for my answer before asking the next. Cover behavioural questions using the STAR format, role-specific technical questions, and at least one curveball question that tests how I think under pressure. After each of my answers give me a score out of 10, tell me exactly what was strong, what was weak, and how a top 5% candidate would have answered that specific question differently. Be honest — do not soften feedback to spare my feelings. Start the interview now."

3/ Build a personal brand that attracts recruiters:

Prompt:

"Audit my LinkedIn profile and help me rebuild it so recruiters come to me instead of me chasing them. Here is my current profile summary and headline: [paste]. My target role is [job title] in [industry]. Rewrite my headline so it communicates value in under 10 words rather than just stating my current job title. Rewrite my summary in first person, opening with a hook about the problem I solve rather than where I have worked. Then give me a list of 10 specific keywords I must include in my profile to appear in recruiter searches for this role, with advice on exactly where to place each one."

4/ Reverse-engineer your dream company:

Prompt:

"I want to work at [company name] in a [job title] role but there are no open positions right now. Help me build a strategy to get hired there within the next 6 months without waiting for a job posting. Research what the company values and what kind of people they typically hire for this role. Give me a step-by-step outreach strategy to connect with employees there, including a sequence of 3 LinkedIn messages I can send to build a relationship before asking for anything. Then write a speculative application email I can send to the hiring manager directly that is compelling enough to make them create a role for me or keep me top of mind when one opens."

5/ Diagnose why you are not getting interviews:

Prompt:

"I have been applying for [job title] roles for [X weeks/months] and getting very few or no interview callbacks. I am going to share my CV, a sample job description I applied for, and my cover letter. Analyse all three and diagnose exactly why I am likely being screened out before a human even reads my application. Check for ATS keyword mismatches, weak positioning, formatting issues, and anything that signals I am not the right fit on paper. Then give me a prioritised action list — starting with the highest-impact fix — so I can make changes before my next application. CV: [paste] Cover letter: [paste] Job description: [paste]"
